

GLOBALIZATION OF ENGLISH

The main part of the development of our speech is a thorough and careful study of the composition of many languages. Knowledge of many languages has a significant and positive effect not only on our speech but also on our minds. None of the languages invented by man have become a universal language. Based on the true spread of languages in the world community, the United Nations has chosen the following six languages as its official or working languages: English, French, Spanish, Russian, Arabic and Chinese. English now plays a special role among them.

One of the most globalized languages among our society and the world is English. Speaking about English among our society, we will witness that 70 percent of the population knows it perfectly enough. Therefore, it is not inconceivable that we view English as a global language of communication. Even in entrance exams to each university, English is included in every area. Applicants intending to qualify must definitely take an English exam, regardless of which area they choose.

Also, when it comes to the globalizing of English, we need to be aware that it is a tool that unites it towards communications, business and policy goals that makes it easier to solve many of the world's issues. Foreign language communication is vital in any area such as business, medical transport technology, trade or marketing.

The concept of English, known as International English, is a global representative of the language.

English and globalization have spread around the world and strengthened the global language. This process began with the reign of two English and American empires in English and continues today with a new virtual empire of the Internet. While Chinese and other languages are rapidly increasing the share of traffic, English can be preserved on the internet. 70% of the world's data is available to the public in English.

Looking back on the facts of modern times, English, first of all, is a language recognized by the world. The number of speakers in the language is approximately 1,5 billion. It should be noted that for many of them, English is not a native language, but a second language.

According to a report by the international educational company EF Education First, those who speak English more fluently than anyone else without their native language are the peoples of Northern Europe.

The Netherlands is ranked first in the rankings, followed by Sweden, Norway and Denmark. Uzbekistan ranks 95th on the list of hundreds of states. On average, Uzbeks took 43.18 points in a hundred-point test. And the result was only an improvement of 0.65 points compared to a year ago. Also, English is the official language in more than 50 countries of the world. This means the native language or first language of the 328 million people on earth.

English is the native language of more than 400 million people living in 12 countries around the world, including the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand.

Today, English has strengthened its position not only in Europe, but also around the world as the language of interethnic dialogue. It is always difficult to mark when a particular language appears, but when it comes to English, we can say that it makes sense to at least talk about it as a separate phenomenon. It is difficult to say anything about this period, but we know that during the fifth and sixth centuries C.E., German invaders came and found refuge on the north-west coast of Europe. They spoke German proto-language (similar to Dutch, German and Scandinavian, which later appeared), but we never know how different their speech was from that of their neighbors. This is how the prosperity of the English language began to root out.

English is the language of society today. He is commanded to be able to get to a good job without knowing him, to go on a trip, and to communicate freely without him. This language is particularly respected in each country. By studying it thoroughly, you will discover a new technological world for yourself and gain a lot of interesting information in that world.

There was also a time when it was forbidden to speak the language. Such a law was introduced in 1969 in Illinois, USA. Their official language is recognized as American. At first glance, there seems to be no difference between them, but in fact there are 24 sheets of English. This creates unprecedented challenges for writers who are the authors of various works. Here is a book about, for example, the famous heroine Harry Potter. He had to be translated from English into American English so that all American people could read it freely.

Many lovers of English always emphasize the theory that this language is very popular because of its simplicity and everyday vitality. However, this theory deserves to be rejected. Imagine that in the same language there are approximately 800,000 words. Not only words, but also synonymous rows are very rich in their pronunciation. For example: a translation of the word "drunk" means "drunk", which is 2241 synonyms for a simple word, which is a huge number. This record is even included in the Guinness Book of Records. It is clear that you will not find such a thing in any other language.

English is not the same, it is constantly being updated with new words. This is also extremely necessary for a better study of the language. Based on the aforementioned facts, it can be concluded that this language will still be the crown of languages that mankind has used for communication for many years (possibly centuries). Studying it becomes the main goal of all students, students and ordinary people who are ready to continuously develop. How easy and quickly mankind achieves its high goals depends on its language knowledge and vocabulary.
